Shedding of lung cells by circulating T lymphocytes, activated in situ by intravenous irradiation and tumor cells, is impaired in tumor bearers. A large proportion of T cells circulate in the blood of tumor-bearing hosts. To establish the degree of in vivo modulation of the function of these cells, we measured the ability of circulating T cells to infiltrate and lyse tumor targets in situ. We show that lytic activity of thymus-derived (T) lymphocytes from the blood of tumor-bearing mice was suppressed in a radiation-specific manner. Both primary and secondary T cell activation was impaired. However, functional activity of T cells derived from tumor bearers was not restricted to the tumor stage, since T cells from mice which had been treated with tumor cells intravenously 18-24 hr previously were also inhibited.

How to Increase the Value of Your Home If you are like most people, the very thought of selling your home probably makes you just a little bit nervous. There are a number of things that can contribute to this state of mental unease. For one thing, you may be worried about the amount that you need to list your home at. Prices will vary depending on the location and general desirability of the area, but what you do need to understand is that it will probably be a great deal less than you have come to expect. Depending on your present circumstances and location, you should be able to find the perfect buyer who will take your home for a fraction of what you would be prepared to pay. Another common source of nervousness in people is the idea of actually having to go into a house and make some serious decisions about how to improve it. Unfortunately, this is something that most people just don't like to do. After all, spending time in someone else's home and determining the importance of certain things that are there can be a pain. The truth is that it doesn't have to be like that. There is a way to get the best return on your investment of money that you could spend on improving your home. It doesn't require a massive cash outlay. It doesn't even require you to undertake any work of your own. The truth is, that many of the decisions you need to make when selling your home already have been made for you. The key, is to focus on letting your home's potential buyers know about the

Europe Competitions and Marketing Fund is secured for the Rugby Sevens Youth Programme in France. This investment by a selection of private and public partners will provide French high schools with the opportunity to develop Rugby Sevens as a sport, alongside a good physical and mental health programme.
France currently has a successful community programme including over 10,000 practitioners and 80,000 players.
However, funds are needed for the development of a comprehensive state-of-the-art programme. RTÉ Education has been granted the contract to provide services for the development programme. We work with partners from the rugby community in France and UK. In France our project partner is the Sud-Ouest Sports University. In Scotland we are working with Murrayfield Excellence. RTÉ Education will seek bids from high school programs throughout France. RTÉ

Education is also considering bidding for the deal in the Irish Republic. The Rugby Sevens Youth Programme is based on a two-week programme delivered in rugby clubs or other suitable locations. The programme is delivered by qualified PE teachers. It will be co-ordinated by the French Rugby Union. The core of the programme is to work on the development of players skills and physical fitness. A key focus is also to provide sport and mental health programmes. The programme will involve
