I have a file named data.xlsx that is downloaded on my local machine. The file is very simple and contains just one column of values. I would like to take this file and push it to the cloud (GCP or AWS), then later I would like to pull it back down and convert it into something more manageable. The problem is that xlsx format is unreadable when it is hosted on the cloud, as it has newlines in the text. I cannot manually open the file as I don't have the proper apps on my system. I tried opening the file and then saving as csv, but this only created a new file, rather than updating the original. Also, I don't know how to copy the content of the file into a csv. I have seen some web-based solutions, but they all seem expensive and/or complicated. Is there a way to push a node in the form of a xlsx file to the cloud while preserving the readability of the data in the file? I am using Node and npm. A: I ended up using an online tool: To get the file to the cloud from my local machine, I used the AWS CLI and put the following command in a file 0cc13bf012

The 2019/20 season has already brought plenty of drama to the Old Firm (and to us), which we'll get to in a few days, but we haven't yet had a chance to truly commemorate a momentous occasion, like the centenary of the end of World War I, which took place on Nov. 11, 1919, a date that a lot of American and British schools like to take advantage of. We've mentioned it before
